Birdwatching

IN NEW YORK CITY AND ON LONG ISLAND

Over 500 species of birds can be seen in New York City's five boroughs and on Long Island, one of the most densely populated and urbanized regions in North America, which also happens to be situated directly on the Atlantic Flyway.

Authors Deborah Rivel and Kellye Rosenheim's new guide, Birdwatching in New York City and on Long Island, gives "inside" seasonal information for both popular birding sites and those off the beaten path to enable bird-watchers to efficiently explore urban and wild birding hotspots.

Books will be for sale by the authors!

DEBORAH RIVEL is an award-winning wildlife film producer/director and owner of WildTones.com, and serves on the board of Audubon New York. She lives in New York City and near birding hotspot Cape May, New Jersey, and has traveled to six continents in search of birds.

KELLYE ROSENHEIM is a popular leader of bird walks in Central Park and Jamaica Bay and works for the New York City Audubon Society.
